A South African Adventure.

An Englishman of the class, unimaginative type goes stumbling through the streets of Mozambique at night to fetch a cup—a brass idol—for one of the girl passengers on board his steamer. He gets lost in one of the labyrinthine blind alleys of the place; and suddenly finds himself in the midst of the Arabian nights—in a world of mystery and peril where life and death hang on a whisper, and men are ruled by elemental laws. He takes fire for a moment. He loves and hates with the passion and brutality of his environment. Then—a breath—and his little rocket of romance goes out. It vanishes in the air of mediocrity, and the Second Class Passenger becomes a respectable citizen again. Percival Gibbon's story in the October McClure's is one of the memorable short stories of the year. With a few powerful strokes it creates a new situation—a new drama—in fiction.

Australian Government Telegraph.

Telegraph and telephone systems everywhere are government enterprises. Telephone wires were formerly in the hands of private companies, but the people wearied of the consequence exactions and annoyances. Likewise, Australia is free from the curse of express companies like Mr. Platt's grafting concern. The parcel post takes everything up to eleven pounds, and above that you can get fast and cheap service on the government railroads.

The telegraph rates are sixteen words for twenty-four cents from any place in any state to any place in any other state on the continent. Within the borders of a state you can send sixteen words within fifteen miles for twelve cents, or any where in the state for eighteen cents. From Sydney to Adelaide, 1,082 miles, you can send sixteen words for twenty-four cents. From Chicago to New York, 940 miles, the rate is forty cents for ten words. From Spring Park, Minn., to Chicago, 445 miles, the rate is fifty cents for ten words. The Australians seem to have rather the best of us on rates. But on the other hand it must be admitted that the Australian telegraph system is not ornamented with the common stock, preferred stock, watered stock, treasury stock, first mortgage bonds, second mortgage bonds, debenture bonds, refunding bonds, bogus bonds, water bonds, worthless bonds, consolidated bonds, plain bonds, and the other beautiful structures with which our superior enterprises are artistically adorned, and of course that makes a difference. By comparison the Australian system of transmitting telegrams for what it costs seems very crude and primitive. —Charles Edward Russell in "Soldiers of the Common Good," in Everybody's Magazine for October.

A Remarkable Career.

Odessa Democrat: Prof. Leo Weiner, well known in Odessa, is now assistant instructor of Slavic languages of Harvard University.

Prof. Weiner came to America from Russia in an early day and landed in New Orleans without money and without friends and with a slight knowledge of the English language. He finally made his way to Kansas City where he sold peanuts and popcorn for a livelihood. He was ambitious and drew on the public library of the city for works from the pen of the world's greatest authors. The librarian called the attention of Prof. Greenwood to the young Russian who immediately became interested in him and, learning that such a man was wanted in the College at Odessa, Weiner was sent here where he taught Latin and Greek the College being under the management of Prof. Rhea.

Prof. Weiner was here in 1883 and 1884 and his rise has been remarkable. His son Norbert, who is not yet twelve years old, has enrolled in the freshman class at Tufts College, in Medford, Mass. Prof. Weiner, after leaving Odessa returned to Kansas City where he taught for several years in Central high school and later was called to the chair of Slavic languages at Missouri State University. In addition to his teaching Prof. Weiner has contributed articles to scientific and educational journals in the United States, Germany and Russia. He has won fame as a linguist and translator in the United States and has written a history of the Yiddish language.

Farms For Sale.

Having more land than I can conveniently look after outside of this state, I will sell one or two of my farms in Lafayette county, well located for schools and churches, 3 of said farms near Dover and two near Higginsville, ranging in size from 150 to 200 acres each. Will sell at $10 per acre less than my neighbors with no better soil.

RYLAND TODD HUNTER, Lexington, Mo. 10-1017

Farmers are generally conceded to be the best informed of all classes of American citizens. This is not because they read more than others, but because their reading matter is better selected, is read under conditions less distracting and more favorable to recollection, and therefore is better digested and more firmly retained. Even in the busiest seasons, farmers keep up with current events and know fully as well as town folks what is going on in the world. Their families, too, are well posted on current events. To supply this high grade demand for general information, The Farmer and Stockman, of Kansas City, Mo., conducts a department of "Current events and Comments," which briefly sets forth all the large events of the times, omitting minor details. This review of the world's news is prepared by a trained journalist and is of great value to farmers and their families. Every farmer's family in this county should take The Farmer and Stockman, especially during the busy season. The INTELLIGENCER is always glad to forward subscriptions for this excellent farm paper. Let us order it for you. 4-14
